

Murray Hill Institute presents
AN EVENING OF CONVERSATION
for
YOUNG PROFESSIONAL WOMEN

Bringing out the best in your business team

Working well with others is essential to creating a favorable work environment where everyone feels that their voice is both heard and appreciated. Doing this effectively can be a real challenge, especially when there are differing opinions and viewpoints to deal with.

Our speaker, Jo Carcedo, Chief Operating Officer at Legacy Community Health Services, has worked 25 years in health and human services implementing programs, developing service delivery systems, grant writing and fundraising. She will share with us valuable lessons learned in maximizing the talents of individuals on the team while respecting the differences. Some topics she will touch on are:

- Working with people of diverse backgrounds and experiences
- Appreciating differences and maximizing talents of the team
- Building consensus

Date: Thursday, February 2, 2012
Time: 6:00-7:00 pm; reception following. Please try to arrive by 5:45 to pass through security.
